It's the time on the ship, which is usually, but not always, the same as the time in the local port. It's the time that will govern what time restaurants and bars open up as listed in the ships daily paper. At sea, it doesn't really matter, but in port it's also the time that the ship arrives and sails regardless of the local time.

Ships are generally larger than boats, but there is no universally accepted distinction between the two. Ships generally can remain at sea for longer periods of time than boats. A legal definition of ship from Indian case law is a vessel that carries goods by sea. A common notion is that a ship can carry a boat, but not vice versa. A US Navy rule of thumb is that ships heel towards the outside ...
